

Restore New Mexico Partnership (New Mexico)

The Restore New Mexico Partnership is a prime example of home-grown collaborative action and represents a very large landscape-scale endeavor. Initially consisting of small unconnected groups with a shared vision, the Partnership is now a diverse coalition responsible for completing nearly 500,000 acres of brush control on public and private lands, reestablishing native vegetation on 36 miles of river, and reclaiming outdated infrastructure, reconnecting more than 80,000 acres of habitat in southeastern New Mexico.
